

Step Three - HOW to turn over your will

Made a decision to turn our will and our lives over to the care of our Higher Power

Take Actions That Deflate Your Ego

Yes, the 3rd Step starts with the phrase “made a decision,” but despite what some may say, it cannot end there. Once you have made the decision, you must take ACTIONS to turn over your will, or that decision is meaningless. (i.e. “faith without works is dead”).

Turning over your will means reducing the influence of your ego. To deflate your ego, you must practice relinquishing control and letting go of stories.

Quieting the influence of your ego will feel unnatural and uncomfortable, and it will take conscious effort at first. But over time, through PRACTICE, it will get easier, and eventually it will become second nature.

Ask for Help

However you found your way to your first meeting, you either explicitly or implicitly asked for help. This was the very first way you practiced turning over your will – when you acknowledged that you couldn’t do it alone.

Continue turning over your will by remembering that you don’t have to face any problem alone. If you have questions, ask them! If you need help, ask for it! If you have importance decisions to make, solicit advice from other sober people.

Take Suggestions

After asking for help, the next step in turning over your will is to act on the advice offered by those with more experience. Often the ACTION of taking the suggestion is as important as or more important than the text of the suggestion. The power you take away from your ego will bring relief.

You may hear some crazy suggestions, but don’t try to use those as evidence that taking suggestions is a bad idea in general; try to stick to those suggestions you hear a lot. Remember that shopping around for the piece of advice that you want to hear – to justify what you’ve already decided to do – is just another form of alcoholic self-will.

Getting a sponsor formalized the process of taking suggestions, providing you with a person whose suggestions you agreed to take especially seriously. Sponsors will not abuse this privilege. If you trust your sponsor and treat their advice very gravely, you will experience relief from your ego’s reflexive desire to control everything.

Meditate

Don’t wait until the 11th step to start meditating. For alcoholics, the greatest benefit of meditation is the ability to quiet the ego through focus on the body in the moment. The ego tells stories, and stories require the past or the future; focusing on the present there automatically reduces the influence of the ego. Focusing on the body draws attention away from our thoughts.

Practice Acceptance

Demanding that the world be a certain way – or believing you would be happy if only some external conditions were met – may be the most common form of self-will. The truth is that you will not be happy until you learn to accept life on life’s terms.

When faced with a situation that you find unpleasant, try saying “this, too, I can accept.” It’s difficult and requires practice to learn to employ this tactic.

This is a pillar of the serenity prayer: Grant me the Serenity to accept the things I cannot change

Practice Willingness

Step 3 invites us to live with intention, not by forcing outcomes, but by aligning our actions with our higher power. This begins with a pause before action, to ask for guidance or reflect on what the next right thing might be.

How you do this is as personal as your higher power. Some pray, some journal, others might speak intentions aloud. What matters is the willingness to open ourselves to something beyond ego, and allowing that connection to shape our choices.

Surrender is not passive, it is choosing to participate in life differently. To be guided and not driven. Consider the rest of the Serenity prayer: Grant me the courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference.

Do the Fourth Step

If you work a perfect 3rd step – completely turning over you will – the rest of the steps wouldn’t be necessary. But you can’t work a perfect 3rd, so keep trying and move forward! Think of step 3 as a decision to turn over your will by doing the rest of the steps

Symptoms of self-will

You are getting upset. ....	You are calm.
You are telling endless stories in your head. ....	You are not plagued by stories.
You are justifying your actions – to yourself or others. ....	You feel no need to justify you actions.
You’re making a lot of plans. ....	You are focused on the next right thing.
You think you can – or should – handle everything alone. ....	You are open to help.
You argue with or reject the suggestions of others. ....	you can let go and take suggestions without fear.

Signs that you are turning your will over
